

Sea turtles

Fact sheet

What is a Sea turtle?

A Sea turtle is a swimming reptile, that uses lungs to breathe air.

What do they eat?

Different species prefer different things! But they generally eat jellyfish.

Where do they live?

Sea turtles live in almost every ocean throughout the world, and nest on tropical and subtropical beaches.

Are Sea turtles endangered?

Nearly all types of sea turtles are endangered and this is due to human activity. Unfortunately, they get caught in nets and are poached.

Fun fact!

If Sea turtle eggs are laid in warmer waters, the eggs will produce females, if the water is cooler, males will be born.

Fun fact!

They can hold their breath for up to 5 hours of underwater activity, and 7 hours if sleeping!

